With so many new printers and multifunction devices coming out, it is hard to know which to purchase. A lot of the manufactures have websites with tools to help you figure out the upgrade to your current equipment. You just have to let them know what you currently have and they will tell you the new equivalent. On some sites you can compare different models to see which is the best fit for your situation.

Also, check out the supplies to see if they can be remanufactured so you can save some money over the cost of new. If you find a couple of pieces of equipment you are interested in, let me know and I will let you know the cost of the supplies. Some of the cartridges come in a regular and high yield version. Most of the time the high yield cartridge is the better deal. Some printers can only use the regular yield so check the models to see which can use both.

If you want to print in color the laser printers cost less to operate than the inkjets because you can get thousands of pages per cartridge verse hundreds. So, don't just look at the cost of the printer but also the supplies.

You might want to think of how you use the printer and if you need an extra paper tray or if you need to print on both side of the page and need a duplexer.
